

Jim Renacci facebook post 4/26/2026:

Almost two years ago, Marcell Strbich came to me and shared his concerns about the election process and election integrity. I listened and told him that if he cared that deeply, he should get involved.

To his credit, he did.

He knew it would mean time on the road and time away from his family, yet he stepped into the arena anyway.

Around that same time, I also met with Robert Sprague. He explained why he was running for Governor. He believed he was the best person for the job — and the only one who could defeat Jon Husted.

Since then, he has run for Governor, spent months pursuing the Lt. Governor position, and ultimately took the only open statewide race available.

I like Robert Sprague. I really do. But I also know the Secretary of State is not the office he truly wanted. He took the only open statewide race that was available when he knew he could not win against Vivek and realized he probably wasn't getting picked as Lt Governor. And that matters.

Liking someone and voting for someone should be two different things.

Marcell stepped into this race as an underdog, but he has never stopped fighting. He has brought forward strong ideas — some of which Robert Sprague is now talking about as well.

We also need to stop this constant merry-go-round of statewide elected officials moving from office to office, often seeking positions they do not truly want simply as stepping stones.

Marcell is a Veteran of the US Air Force, where he served our country honorably for 20 years.

Marcell is running for this office because he wants this office. He has great ideas and will do his best to carry them out.

The election is only a few weeks away, and I encourage you to take a serious look at Marcell Strbich and what he stands for.

Vote May 5th for Marcell Strbich.

I know I will be.
